...to create a lovely doll in soft, cosy dress.

THE Botanical Carden COLOUR PALETTE

Developing THE COLLECTION

Each doll is absolutely unique, and made by hand.

The heads are formed by a precise turner,
and the faces are painted by me—one by one.

The tiny clothes were designed and made with meticulous care.

Every piece of the dolls has their own story.

Janka's Day at The Botanical Garden

Janka had heard of special forests before, where the trees reach up to the sky and there are leaves the size of umbrellas in the undergrowth. These stories inspired her, and she often daydreamed about hiding beneath the leaves from the rain, or resting in her hammock suspended high in the canopy. After the adventure filled day she would fall asleep to the sweet scent of the forest every night, and she would be woken by the song of colorful birds. Now, she was tossing and turning, unable to fall asleep because she knew that if she looked out the window, all she would see is grey buildings, not sky-high trees, and definitely not wondrous, colorful birds. After the restless night, sunrise found her at the gate of the botanical garden. She visited all the greenhouses because she wanted to draw her favorite plants, so she could have a more realistic memory of the fantasy forest when she got home. While she was drawing, a seed fell onto her paper. And another, and another... soon, she had a fistful of little pellets of all colors and shapes in her hand. At first, Janka just stood there, puzzled. When the trees whispered to each other knowingly above her head, she finally realized that this was their way of thanking her for her attention. She ran home to plant the seeds. She planted a little seed in every pot, bowl and mug. Raising them wasn't easy, but she persistently cared for the little seedlings, which soon grew into beautiful, tall trees. They could even support her hammock, sooner than she would have expected, and Janka swayed in it contently: she finally had her own jungle.
